A Pretty Screen,

To make a prety folding screen buy a ik, salt and pepper. Spread thick with small-sized, square-frame clothes-horse top rail, and then cover each panel with China silk, drawn taut at the top and bottom with a string or wire, like the bottom sash of a window which is arranged in this way. For the outside curtains and valance a contrasting pattern is better. For instance, a pale pink for the panels, with curtains of a wild rose pattern would be pretty; or riolet silk, with a violet besprinkled overdrapery. The valance at the top and the side curtains are exactly like those adapted for window covering, and are tied back with bows of appropriate ribbon. This decorative screen need only cost a few dollars and would make an exceedingly pretty present.
